Take the case of that lively little bit of humanity, that comes tumbling in upon your morning drowe, all life and activity, with the easence of a cage full of magpies and minuteys, keeping little torgue and the little bit of humanity, that comes tumbling in upon your morning drowe, all life and activity, with the easence of a cage full of magpies and minuteys, keeping little torgue and history on your aboulder, the tiny frame tired out with the long, busy day of active childhood. See how also has wound up the manikin again, and set it off brim full of action. Ere ybody allows that sleep is good for children, but the huge frown of the Julke of Wellingten against the diagrace of being tired, the sad crit of sleep, and the grievance of having to go to bed at all, is abundantly re-choed by adults of the class Mammalis, species Man.

Making a liberal allowance for cases where loss of sleep is an involuntary affiction, there still remain an immense proportion of persons in scitive life, of both sexies who begin by fixing too brief an allotment of hours for sleep, and then are far more strict in their accounts with the bottcher and baker, than with themselves in a staple quite as valuable as bread and beet, in promoting the weal of the animal ecoquety. Statistics would abow that early breaking down and decay of men of business, loss of physhed.

Number four is a Philadelphia gentleman:

In the primness of his deportment he resembles the New Englander. The Quaker and he Paritanic elements have their point of contact.

There is difference, however; you will not hear the Philadelphian talk fifteen minutes without mentioning Philadelphia. His face, though generally thin, has also a warmer color, and hus mouth more of the Southern fullness. Yet, notwithstanding this, there is something plached and contracted in this personality which I find difficult to describe. Perhaps it lies mainly in his toice, which is thin and sharp
He pronounces the a in pass, color, and kindred
